YOUR NETWORK

Building your trusted network

How to build a small circle of colleagues you can refer to, ask for cover and consult with.

| AUDIENCE | FORMAT | VERSION | TIME |
|---|---|---|---|
| Psychologists · Psychiatrists | Guide | 1.0 · Nov 2026 | 15 minutes, then ongoing |

| | |
|---|---|
| WHAT IT IS | A guide to choosing and keeping a trusted circle of colleagues, the way a group practice works. |
| USE IT WHEN | When you join PsyAlliance, and every few months as your practice changes. |
| CUSTOMIZE FIRST | Your specialties, your states and the kinds of help you most often need. |

1. Start with a conversation

- [ ] Pick three to five colleagues whose work you respect and whose practice complements yours.
- [ ] Have a short call: how they work, who they see, when they are available.
- [ ] Agree how you prefer to be contacted for referrals, cover and consultation.

2. Look for complementary practice

- [ ] At least one colleague licensed in each state where your clients are.
- [ ] Colleagues who see the clients you do not: other age groups, specialties or a prescriber.
- [ ] A colleague who could cover your clients at short notice.

3. Keep it useful

- [ ] Keep your availability current so colleagues know when to ask you.
- [ ] Make considered introductions when there is a good fit, and say why.
- [ ] Close the loop on every referral and thank people who help.

4. Review it

- [ ] Every few months, check that your trusted circle still matches your practice.
- [ ] Add colleagues you have worked with well; remove those you no longer refer to.

BEFORE YOU USE IT

Trust in PsyAlliance ranks colleagues in your matches; it is not an endorsement and does not replace your own professional judgment about competence and fit for a client. Referral relationships must not involve payment for referrals. This guide is educational and is not legal or clinical advice.

NOTES